Leith School of Art is a small independent college of the visual arts, providing intensively taught and highly structured courses within an intimate and supportive environment. Located in Edinburgh, we offer a dynamic and creative learning experience. All money raised will be put into the School's Assisted Places Scheme, which gives support with fees and living expenses to qualifying students.

Leith School of Art is an independent organisation, receiving no state funding; however it is central to the School's aims that no one should be excluded from the benefits that being a student at the School brings. Money is raised each year to ensure that students from a wide cross section of society are able to attend courses at the School. The School has a track record of being able to launch these students' careers in the arts and many have gone on to achieve considerable success in their field.
